Chapter 4 — Granting access to a document

Section 13 — Request for access to a document

(1) A request for access to an official document shall be sufficiently detailed, so that the authority can determine which document the request concerns. The person requesting access shall be assisted, by means of official diaries and indexes, in specifying the document to which access is being requested. The person requesting access need not identify himself or herself nor provide reasons for the request, unless this is necessary for the exercise of the authority's discretion or for determining if the person requesting access has the right of access to the document.

(2) When requesting access to a secret document, a personal data filing system controlled by an authority or any other document, access to which can be granted only subject to certain conditions, the person requesting access shall, unless specifically otherwise provided, declare the use to which the information is to be put, as well as give the other details necessary for determining whether the conditions have been met and, where necessary, explain what arrangements have been made for the protection of the information.

Section 14 — Decision on access

(1) Unless otherwise provided in section 15, subsection 3 or elsewhere in law, the decision to grant access to an official document shall be made by the authority in possession of the document. However, a municipal council may, in municipal regulations, provide a municipal body serving as an authority as referred to in this Act the right to transfer to a subordinate official, to the extent it decides, the public authority to decide on access. The decision to grant access to a document commissioned by an authority or to a document issued in connection with a task performed on commission by any other authority shall be made by the commissioning authority, unless otherwise required by the nature of the commission.

(2) Access to the contents of a document shall be granted by an official or employee who has been so designated by the authority or to whom the task otherwise belongs by virtue of his or her office or duties.

(3) If the official or the other person referred to in subsection 2 refuses to grant the requested access, he or she shall

(1) inform the person requesting access of the reason for the refusal;

(4) inform the person requesting access of the charges involved in the consideration of the request.

(4) A matter referred to in this section shall be considered without delay, and access to a document in the public domain shall be granted as soon as possible, and in any event within two weeks from the date when the authority received the request for the document. If the number of the requested documents is large, if they contain secret parts or if there is any other comparable reason for the consideration and the decision of the matter requiring special measures or otherwise an irregular amount of work, the matter shall be decided and access to the document granted within one month of the receipt of the request for access by the authority.

Section 15 — Forwarding the request for a document to another authority

(1) If access is requested to a document prepared by another authority or pertaining to a matter under consideration by another authority, the request may be forwarded to be dealt with by the authority that has prepared the document and is responsible for the consideration of the matter as a whole.

(2) If access is requested to data identifying or providing the address of a person, corporation, real estate or vehicle or other data for identification or provision of address that is recorded by another authority for public use, the request may be forwarded to the appropriate register authority for consideration.

(3) If access is requested to a document which, in accordance with section 25, is required to bear a security classification and which has been drafted by another authority, the request shall be transferred for the consideration of the authority that had drafted the document. A matter concerning a document classified as secret as referred to in the Act on International Security Classification Obligations (588/2004) shall be transferred to the authority to which the document has been submitted by the contractual party. (495/2005)

Section 16 — Modes of access

(1) Access to an official document shall be by explaining its contents orally to the requester, by giving the document to be studied, copied or listened to in the offices of the authority, or by issuing a copy or a printout of the document. Access to the public contents of the document shall be granted in the manner requested, unless this would unreasonably inconvenience the activity of the authority owing to the volume of the documents, the inherent difficulty of copying or any other comparable reason.

(2) Access to the public information in a computerised register of the decisions of an authority shall be provided by issuing a copy in magnetic media or in some other electronic form, unless there is a special reason to the contrary. Similar access to information in any other official document shall be at the discretion of the authority, unless otherwise provided in an Act. However, a copy may be provided of a video recording or other corresponding recording that contains a hearing or other event recorded by an authority in which a person is heard, only if the person heard in the recording consents to this or if with consideration to the contents of the recording it is apparent that the provision of a copy would not violate his or her privacy. (385/2007)

(3) Access may be granted to a personal data filing system controlled by an authority in the form of a copy or a printout, or an electronic-format copy of the contents of the system, unless specifically otherwise provided in an Act, if the person requesting access has the right to record and use such data according to the legislation on the protection of personal data. However, access to personal data for purposes of direct marketing, polls or market research shall not be granted unless specifically provided otherwise or unless the data subject has consented to the same.

Section 17 — Taking the right of access into account in decision-making

(1) When making decisions under this Act and also otherwise when performing its duties, an authority shall see to it that, in view of sections 1 and 3, access to information on the activities of the authority is not unduly or unlawfully restricted, nor more restricted than what is necessary for the protection of the interests of the person protected, and that persons requesting access are treated on an equal basis.

(2) In the application of the provisions on document secrecy, attention shall also be paid to whether the secrecy obligation is independent of the case-by-case consequences of access (strict secrecy), whether any access to the document is based on the adverse consequences of access (secrecy based on putative access), or whether any access to the document requires that there manifestly are no adverse consequences of access (secrecy based on putative secrecy).

(3) In considering the provision to a specified recipient of information that is to be kept secret from the public within the scope of secrecy based on putative access and secrecy based on putative secrecy, care shall be taken that the recipient has the obligation of confidentiality in accordance with this Act and that information is provided to other than the authorities and to those working in such authorities, only if there is an important general reason for the provision of the information. (495/2005)

Section 18 — Good practice on information management

(1) In order to create and realise good practice on information management, the authorities shall see to the appropriate availability, usability, protection, integrity and other matters of quality pertaining to documents and information management systems and, for this purpose, especially:

- (1) maintain an index of any matters submitted and taken up for consideration and any matters considered and decided, or otherwise make sure that their public documents can be easily located;
- (2) draw up and make available specifications on their information management systems and the public information contained therein, unless granting access to such information would be contrary to the provisions in section 24 or in some other Act;
- (3) when the introduction of information management systems or administrative or legislative reforms are being prepared, analyse the effect of the proposed reform on the publicity, secrecy and protection of documents and on the quality of the information contained therein, as well as undertake the necessary measures for the safeguarding of the rights pertaining to the information and its quality, and for the arrangement of the protection of the documents, the information management systems and the information contained therein;
- (4) plan and realise their document and information administration and the information management systems and computer systems they maintain in a manner allowing for the effortless realisation of access to the documents and for the appropriate archiving or destruction of the documents, the information management systems and the information contained therein, as well as for the appropriate safeguarding and data security arrangements for the protection, integrity and quality of the documents, the information management systems and the information contained therein, paying due attention to the significance of the information and the uses to which it is to be put, to the risks to the documents and the information management systems and to the costs incurred by the data security arrangements;
- (5) see to it that their personnel are adequately informed of the right of access to the documents they deal with and the procedures, data security arrangements and division of tasks relating to the provision of access and the management of information, as well as to the safeguarding of information, documents and information management systems, and that compliance with the provisions, orders and guidelines issued for the realisation of good practice on information management is properly monitored.

[subsection (2) has been repealed; 635/2011)

(3) The provisions in the Archives Act (831/1994) and the provisions and orders issued on the basis of that Act apply to the duties of the archive service.

Section 19 — Duty of the authorities to provide access to information in pending matters

 - (2) plans, accounts and decisions on pending matters of general importance.
- (2) When requested to do so, the authority shall, orally or by other suitable means, provide access to information on the stage of consideration, alternatives and impact assessments relating to matters referred to in subsection 1, as well as on the opportunities of private individuals and corporations to exercise an influence on the matters.

Section 20 — Duty of the authorities to produce and disseminate information

(1) The authorities shall promote the openness of their activities and, where necessary for this purpose, produce guides, statistics and other publications, as well as information materials on their services and practices, as well as on the social conditions and developments in their field of competence. When the extent of this duty is being assessed, due consideration shall be given to the opportunities to obtain information on the activity of the authority by means of access to its documents or the general compilations of statistics.

(2) The authorities shall publicise their activities and services, as well as the rights and obligations of private individuals and corporations in matters falling within their field of competence.

(3) The authorities shall see to it that the documents or the pertinent indexes which are essential to the general public's access to information are available where necessary in libraries or public data networks, or otherwise easily accessible to the members of the public.

Section 21 — Production of sets of data on request

(1) When requested to do so, an authority may compile and deliver a set of data formed from signs contained in one or more computerised information management systems and maintained for various purposes, if such delivery is not contrary to the provisions on document secrecy and the protection of personal data owing to the search criteria used, the volume or quality of the data or the intended use of the set of data.

(2) Where permitted by the authorities concerned and subject to the provisions in subsection 1, the set of data may be compiled also from information management systems maintained by different authorities.

The provision on confidentiality shall apply also after the service or the performance of the task on behalf of the authority has ceased.

(2) What is provided in subsection 1 applies also to a person serving as a trainee or otherwise in an authority or commissioned by the authority or in the service of a person commissioned by the authority or who has acquired secret information on the basis of an Act or a permission based on an Act, unless otherwise provided in the Act or laid down in the permission. Also a person to whom an authority has, within the scope of secrecy based on putative access or secrecy based on putative secrecy, provided information that is to be kept secret from the public, has a confidentiality obligation. A party, his or her representative or counsel shall not disclose to third parties secret information obtained on the basis of party status and concerning other persons than the party himself or herself. Chapter 7 — Derogations from secrecy and declassification

Section 26 — General principles for granting access to secret information

(1) An authority may provide access to a secret official document, if:

(1) there is a specific provision on such access or on the right of such access in an Act; or

(2) the person whose interests are protected by the secrecy provision consents to the access.

(2) Notwithstanding the secrecy provisions, the authority may grant access to information on the economic status or business or professional secret of another person, information on a recipient of health care or social welfare, information on the private life of a person, as referred to in section 24, subsection 1(32), or comparable information that is secret under another Act, if access is necessary:

(1) for the realisation of a private person's or some other authority's statutory duty of information; or

(2) for the realisation of a payment or any other claim that is to be taken care of by the authority granting access.

An authority may grant access to a secret document in order to carry out executive assistance and for the performance of a task that is commissioned by it or otherwise to be performed on its behalf, if such access is indispensable for the assistance or the performance of the task. For such tasks, access to secret information may be granted also if the removal of the secret information is obviously not feasible owing to its large volume or for any other comparable reason. The authority shall ensure in advance that the arrangements for the secrecy and the protection of the information are appropriate.

Section 27 — Access to archival documents

(1) Access may be granted to a secret official document which has been archived in accordance with the Archives Act for research or another approved purpose, unless otherwise ordered by the authority which has sent the document to be archived.

When a decision on access is made, due consideration shall be given to the safety of the freedom of scientific research.

(2) The person who has gained access to the document shall undertake in writing not to use the document to the detriment or defamation of the person whom it concerns, nor to the detriment or defamation of a person close to him or her, nor in violation of the other interests protected by the secrecy provision.

Section 28 — Official permission to gain access to a secret document

(1) Unless otherwise provided in an Act, an authority may, on a case-to-case basis, grant permission to gain access to a secret document for purposes of scientific research, statistical compilations or the preparation of official plans or studies, if it is obvious that access will not violate the interests protected by the secrecy provision. When a decision on access is made, due consideration shall be given to the safety of the freedom of scientific research. If the information in the document has been handed over to the authority on the consent of the person whose interests are protected by the secrecy provision, the permission may be granted only subject to the conditions for use and access laid down in the consent. If permissions are required for documents in the possession of a number of authorities within the purview of the same ministry, the ministry shall decide on the permission after, where necessary, having heard the authorities.

(2) A permission referred to in subsection 1 above may be granted for a fixed period; the conditions necessary for the protection of the public and private interests involved shall be attached to the permission. The permission may be withdrawn if this is deemed to be necessary.

Section 29 — Granting access to secret information to some other authority

(1) An authority may grant access to a secret document to some other authority, if

(1) there is a specific provision on access or the right of access in an Act;

(2) the person whose interests are protected by the secrecy provision consents to the same;

(3) the document is necessary for the consideration of a matter pertaining to advance information, a preliminary ruling, an appeal or a complaint against a decision by an authority, an appeal for nullification or a submission regarding a measure taken by an authority, or a complaint made to an international body for the administration of justice or investigation;

(4) the information is required for the performance of a specific monitoring or inspection task by the authority.

(2) An authority may grant another authority access to an address or other contact information which is secret by virtue of section 24, subsection 1(31).

(3) An authority may open a technical interface for another authority in order to access, from its personal data filing system, information which the latter authority must take into account in its decision-making under a specific statutory obligation. If there is a provision on the secrecy of personal data, the interface may be used only for retrieving information on persons who have consented to the same, unless specifically otherwise provided on access to secret information.

Section 30 — Granting access to secret information to the authority of a foreign state or to an international institution

In addition to the specific statutory provisions on the same, an authority may grant access to a secret official document to an authority of a foreign state or to an international institution, if an international agreement binding on Finland contains a provision on such co-operation between Finnish and foreign authorities, or there is a provision to this effect in an Act binding on Finland, and if the Finnish authority in charge of the co-operation could under this Act have access to the document.

Section 31 — Declassification of an official document (495/2005)

(1) An official document shall no longer be secret when the period of secrecy provided in an Act or ordered on the basis of an Act has ended or when the authority which has ordered the secrecy of the document has revoked that order.

(2) The period of secrecy for official documents is 25 years, unless otherwise provided or ordered on the basis of law. A document which is secret for the protection of private life, as provided in section 24, subsection 1, paragraphs 24-32, or a comparable document which is kept secret on the basis of another Act or an order based on another Act shall be kept secret for 50 years after the death of the person whom the document concerns or, if the time of death is unknown, for 100 years.

Such documents become public when the real estate, installation or device is no longer used for the purpose for which the document was to be kept secret, or the information is no longer contained in a valid plan or the security classification has been cancelled.

(4) If it is obvious that the declassification of the document would, even after the period provided in this section, cause significant harm to the interests protected by the secrecy provision, the Government may extend the period by at most 30 years. What is provided above however, does not apply to documents referred to in subsection 3.

(5) The period of secrecy of an official document shall run from the date indicated in the document or, if the document bears no date, from the day of its completion. The period of secrecy of a document submitted to an authority by a private person shall run from the day when the authority has received the document.

Section 32 — Application to the duty of non-disclosure

The provisions in this chapter on secrecy and declassification apply, where appropriate, also to information subject to the duty of non-disclosure.

The decision on the request for rectification is subject to appeal as provided in the Act on Administrative Judicial Procedure by appeal to the Administrative Court with has jurisdiction on the basis of section 12 of the Act on Administrative Judicial Procedure. The decision of the Administrative Court is not subject to appeal. (495/2005)

(2) However, in the cases referred to above in subsection 1, paragraphs 1–4 a charge is levied that corresponds to the costs of obtaining the information when access is requested to a document which cannot be specified and found in the manner referred to in section 13, subsection 1 from document registers of the authority maintained in accordance with this Act using the document classification to be used in such registers, the identifying code of the document nor from computerized registers using their search functions.

(3) A charge is levied for the provision of access on the basis of sections 9 and 11 in the form of a copy or print-out, with said charge corresponding to the amount of costs incurred by the authority in providing access, unless a lower charge is provided in law or a lower charge is decided on the basis of the Municipal Act (365/1995). The charge is levied and collected as decided on the basis of the Municipal Act or as provided for the charges referred to in section 7, subsection 2 of the Act on Criteria for Charges Payable to the State.

A copy of a document and the provision of access to information in the form of a printout or by means of a technical interface, otherwise electronically or in a comparable manner, as well as the retrieval and delivery service provided by an authority, may be subject to a charge, as specifically provided elsewhere. Ordinary requests for access to a document are deemed to be requests for access to a document other than one referred to in subsection 2, that is fully public or from which the secret parts can be deleted without difficulty. In the case of ordinary requests for access to a document, the costs of retrieval of the document and of the deletion of the secret parts of the document are not to be assessed as costs in calculating the basis for the charge to be levied as referred to in sections 1 and 10 of the Act on Criteria for Charges Payable to the State.

(5) The authorities referred to above in section 4 shall determine in advance the charges to be levied in the situations referred to in subsection 3 for the provision of a copy and print-out and publish these in public data networks, unless publication is to be deemed obviously unnecessary.

(6) A charge is levied for the provision of access to a document on the basis of this Act in cases other than those referred to in sections 9 and 11, in accordance with what is provided in the Act on Criteria for Charges Payable to the State or other legislation or with what is decided on the basis of the Municipalities Act.
